

Deutsche Bahn in talks to buy Veolia Transdev Central Europe

21 Mar 2013 · by Marc Johnson · in Business, Train Operating Companies · 0 Comments

Deutsche Bahn (DB) is in talks to acquire Veolia Transdev Central Europe regional transport services.

The acquisition is still subject to approval by DB's supervisory board and the relevant merger control authorities.

DB has said that details of the acquisition will be published if negotiations are concluded successfully.

Veolia Transdev Central Europe operates regional bus transport in six Central Eastern European countries, including Croatia, Poland, Serbia, Slovakia, Slovenia and the Czech Republic.

DB Arriva, Deutsche Bahn's subsidiary responsible for regional transport outside of Germany, operates bus and rail transport in 12 European countries. These include the Central Eastern European markets in Poland, Slovakia, the Czech Republic and Hungary.

Related News

- Stuttgart 21 project costs rise by €2bn
- Bombardier challenges DB claims
- National Express to operate German commuter services