A POLICEMAN who spent 30 years fighting crime in Warwickshire, rising through the ranks from Constable to Chief Superintendent, has been appointed the new Chief Executive to the office of Warwickshire Police and Crime Commissioner.

Ron Ball, Warwickshire's Police and Crime Commissioner, has appointed of Neil Hewison as Chief Executive and Monitoring Officer.

He said: "Neil brings a great deal more to the role in addition to his very distinguished police career in Warwickshire Police and more recently his role in the criminal justice system. My job is all about partnership working and Neil has a clear understanding of the importance of those relationships.

With a police officer father and nurse mother, 56-year-old Neil has described himself as having public service in his blood.

Neil retired from Warwickshire Police in 2012 and has been leading Criminal Justice for Warwickshire Police working to provide a more responsive and transparent service for the public of Warwickshire.
