

British Transport Police Authority

MEMBER

£16,497 for circa 30 days per annum – London

Preferred starting date: Early 2019

The British Transport Police (BTP) is the specialist police force for Britain's railways, providing a policing service to rail operators, their staff and passengers, keeping them safe and secure. As a public body, the British Transport Police Authority (BTPA) holds the BTP to account for the delivery of this vital police service, ensuring its effectiveness and efficiency.

The Secretary of State for Transport wishes to appoint up to four new Members of the BTPA. Applicants should have knowledge and experience in one or more of the areas listed below:

- The interests of persons providing railway services or the interests of railway passengers; and
- Experience in operating at a senior level in complex organisations; and/or
- Organisational performance management.

We would also encourage applications from candidates who can offer broader experience with suitable skills including legal, policing governance, business planning, or commercial contracting.

You will be expected to demonstrate a desire and proven ability to challenge in a constructive fashion to achieve clear outcomes. You should also be able to demonstrate strong team-working, communication, strategic, and interpersonal skills; sound judgement and a high level of personal integrity; experience of engaging effectively with the commercial world and understanding the user perspective; and a commitment to an equal opportunities and diversity agenda.

So if you are looking to make a major contribution to an important public service, which impacts on the daily lives of passengers and rail staff across the country every day, this opportunity may be for you.
